

DESIGN IN THE DESERT

Henriksen/Butler delivers a state-of-the-art showroom and a dynamic design center to St. George.

After a decade-long presence in St. George, Henriksen/Butler (H/B) has developed a new business park created to support southern Utah's burgeoning design community. While shops continue to sprout in this new design center, the anchor is H/B's new headquarters. It consolidates their showroom, warehouse and office spaces, allowing designers, décor buffs and homeowners alike to experience all H/B components in one stop.

"Our office blends hospitality, residential, commercial and office design all into one," says Mark Hendrickson, principal designer and president.

The H/B team partnered with Rick Edwards, lead designer for all H/B showrooms, Riverwood Mills and MRW Design Associates to create the striking studio-style showroom. Concrete walls, wood-look cladding and towering windows deliver contemporary, industrial style to the exterior and integrate the dynamic structure into the natural palette of St. George's desert landscape. "This is truly a game changer for design in Southern Utah," Hendrickson says.

Enter the open lobby, set below a cloud of Nelson Bubble lamps, and you'll be drawn into the light-filled showroom and workspace curated with classic, modern products. Customers can browse displays of flooring materials and wall décor, and drool over chic lounge settings and dynamic lighting fixtures. But the star is the commercial furnishings department, where modular walls and conference room layouts inspire brilliant design. Open by appointment; 882 W. 1600 South, St. George, hbdg.com

—MEGAN BARTHOLOMEW

